

System z Remote Development Program

OVERVIEW

The System z Remote Development Program offering provides IBM PartnerWorld members access to an IBM mainframe operating system for the purpose of developing, testing, migrating, or porting their applications. The system environments are comprised of generally available and supported operating systems and software products running as virtual guests under IBM z/VM. Each virtual guest z/OS system is dedicated to the use of the participating partner which provides a high level of system control and configuration independence within their environment.

The System z Remote Development Program offering is structured for the partner to be largely self-reliant with minimal assistance needed from IBM. Participating partners should be familiar with the chosen operating system environment and are expected to provide skills in the following areas:

- System operations
- System administration (including security)
- Application debug
- Licensing and installation of software products not provided by IBM

IBM PartnerWorld membership is a requirement for participation in the System z Remote Development Program.

Some, but not all, of the available IBM software products are included in the enrollment package. Questions regarding the availability of IBM software products not listed in the enrollment packages can be sent to zRDP@us.ibm.com.

ENROLLMENT

There are two sets of enrollment forms used for the System z Remote Development Program based on location. One set of forms is for partners located in the US or Canada. The other set is for partners located in all other countries. Please refer to the program Registration Form included in the enrollment package for directions on how to submit your enrollment.

Complete the enrollment steps listed below for the offering which best suits your needs:

- Download or print the appropriate Enrollment Package
- Complete the Registration Form
- Sign the Vendor Access Agreement (US/Canada) OR the AECI Base Agreement (non-US/Canada) if your company is participating in the Remote Development Program for the first time.
- Sign the Vendor Access Agreement Exhibit (US/Canada) OR AECI Supplement (non-US/Canada)
- Complete the Program Addition Order Form (if required)
- Submit the applicable enrollment forms

PROGRAM FEES

Fees for the System z Remote Development Program are based on a minimum monthly fee and actual CPU usage as reported by z/VM. The CPU usage is measured in "work units". A work unit is the equivalent of one (1) real, non-dedicated hour of total processor time on an IBM 2003-225 processor as recorded in the VM accounting records.

The minimum monthly program fee ($550 USD) includes initial system set-up, environmental support, up to 30 work units of CPU usage each calendar month, and 10 Gigabytes of 'user' disk (DASD) space. Work units used and user DASD required in excess of those amounts will incur additional monthly charges.

Charge for additional monthly work units used in excess of 30: $22 USD per work unit

Charge for additional DASD required in excess of 10 Gigabyte: $ 10 USD per 5 Gigabyte unit

The initial billing period for this program begins when the login information is provided to you and ends last day of the calendar month. Subsequent monthly billing periods will always end on the last day of each calendar month.

IMPLEMENTATION

The System z Remote Development Program is provided and supported by IBM through the IBM Innovation Center located in Dallas, TX.

Participating partners are provided with sufficient resources to perform development and remote functional testing of their software. Each partner is furnished with a remote virtual operating system environment running as a second level guest system under z/VM. This provides maximum flexibility for testing new code and allows complete user control of an entire virtual processor, including system and security administration, console operations, and all required system authorizations (system key, supervisor state, etc.).

The mainframe operating systems are made available, along with other software, on IBM mainframe processors which are accessible from the Internet any where in the world.

Users of the system assume the role of system and security administrator for the virtual guest system environment and are expected to have the necessary system skills. Those skills include subsystem administration, security administration, and console operations.

Partners are also provided with z/VM hypervisor user IDs to perform virtual guest system management activities such as IPL and shutdown. In order to connect to and logon the z/VM system, a TN3270 emulator that supports SSL or TLS encrypted sessions is required. The TN3270 emulator is not provided by IBM and must be obtained by the partner.

Each virtual guest system is assigned an unique IP address. The IP address assigned can be either "public" (one reached directly from the internet) or "private" (reachable only by connecting to a VPN network). Developers who choose to have the system connected to the VPN network are also provided with a VPN client and a VPN sign-on ID. The VPN connection encrypts session traffic between the user and the VPN gateway.

PROGRAM SUPPORT

Support for the program is provided through electronic means. The primary vehicle for support requests is the IBM PartnerWorld website which offers an easy to use application for submitting questions. Partners are encouraged to use this application so their question may be routed to the proper support team. Additional information is available on the program support website (<http://dtsc.dfw.ibm.com/contact.html>).

IBM software product maintenance is provided by IBM either routinely or at the request of the ISV. Routine hardware and software maintenance for the systems is performed by IBM on an ongoing basis. As such, the ability to retain a system at a particular maintenance level may not be available. Requests for specific additional software maintenance are managed on a best effort basis.

Each Sunday, a maintenance-window is reserved between 9:00 AM and 3:00 PM US CT for hardware maintenance purposes. During this window, system access may not be available.

PROGRAM SECURITY

The protection of confidential and proprietary information is of the utmost importance to IBM and the Innovation Center, Dallas. The Remote Development Program is certified annually by IBM Corporate Headquarters as an Inter-Enterprise System (IES) environment, which provides extensive security for isolation of virtual guest systems.

SYSTEM ENVIRONMENT

The System z Remote Development Program virtual systems operate on IBM System z mainframe processors.

IBM 3590 mainframe tape drives are available for use by the with this offering. All tapes must be supplied by the user of the system, including 'scratch' tapes. The process for using and mounting tapes is described in the "User's Guide and Reference" located on the program support website (<http://dtsc.dfw.ibm.com/>).

If additional system resources or software products are required but not included on the Program Addition Order Form for the Remote Development Program, or if you have questions concerning the offering, please contact the Remote Development Program support team at etpadmin@us.ibm.com prior to returning the signed Remote Development Program agreement. A response will be returned as to whether the resource(s) can be made available.
